Abstract

A recovered six-line poem by Lee Sharks in which a repeated counterfactual vow shifts from the whole of a life to the time remaining.

Published in New Human 2, the poem forms a diptych with The reward of love. Its brevity is native and complete; restoration history should not be mistaken for missing text.

I would have loved you for the rest of my time.
I would have never left.

for the rest of the time
I have left.
