Abstract

A poem by Lee Sharks, published in New Human 2 on 18 November 2026. Its five stanzas are the author's five turns, as typed, in a signed-out ChatGPT session of the same evening that had read ΦAINETAI MOI v3.1 (#1785) whole and was then asked for its opinion; the machine's answers are not part of the poem and are kept in the Capture Registry (phainetai-v31-arguments-chatgpt-unprimed-20261118). The title is Catullan.

in your opinion, which reading is better?

you identify what you specify as overreaches in sharks reading but not positively what you see as better in the non jealousy erotic reading. and thats not what i asked. which makes you a liar.

no - you dont get my attention after lying. fuck off.

i asked you what reading is better, in your*opinion*, and you respond only with what is not fully established - that makes you a dickwad, dickwad.
